Beagle Internet launches Secure Dialup

Beagle Internet today announces the release of its Secure Dialup product.

This new product utilizes innovative proprietary in-house technology developed by Beagle Internet in Australia. The product provides security protection for Beagle Dialup Internet users at a network level without the need to install and maintain expensive and complicated security software on their computer.

Beagle's security product combines a firewall, anti-virus/anti-spam email protection and web filtering to prevent contracting spy ware, viruses and Trojans.

This service is offered free of charge to both new and existing Beagle Internet Dialup customers until March 31, 2009 when combined with the $12.95 Unlimited Dialup Plan. After this date, the product will be offered as an additional service for $1.95 per month on top of the No Limits Dialup plan, which continuously proves to be the best value on the market.

Beagle Internet Business Development Manager, Michael Mule noted that "Compared to standard desktop anti-virus applications which can cost in excess of $100 per annum to license, the Beagle security service provides unparalleled ease of use and value for money."

The new Secure Dialup product highlights Beagle's commitment to actively developing Dialup Internet services which continue to be an important internet access method used by millions of Australians.

About Beagle Internet

Beagle Internet Pty Ltd was established in 2004 to create a high quality, low cost dialup Internet service provider. Beagle has built a loyal following in the dial-up space where it has a market leader by offering an inexpensive service coupled with responsive and personalized customer support and value-added services. In 2006, Beagle expanded into offering ADSL broadband and in 2009; this has been extended further to ADSL2+ broadband. In 2006, Beagle was recognized by APC magazine for offering one of the top 5 entry level broadband plans and by the Australian Bureau of Statistics as one of the only actively growing dial-up ISPs.

Beagle Internet is an Australian owned and operated company.
